Disabilities Charter

People with learning disabilities want the same things as everyone else does.

- My Life, My Rights

More chances in life; more choice; to be listened to; to be treated as adults; to be given dignity and respect & for you to keep our information private.

- My Community. My Relationships

To be able to travel independently; help to understand money so we have more control; to train other people in what our lives are like – we're the experts; to get involved with our community; to have paid jobs; the right to enjoy friendships and sex, just like everyone else and the right to have a family.

- My social life

To go places everyone else goes and be welcome; to do stuff in the evenings and at weekends; to enjoy friendships, relationships and sex as we choose; for people to welcome us and understand what we need when we are out and to have more info about what's going on.

- My Support

Help to follow our dreams; to train staff who work with us; to get to know people who support us; to trust people to do what they say and to have access to advocacy.

- My Health

To have the healthcare we need from GPs and hospitals; have a health check every year; staff to have training by us; to have appointments that are easy to get , and on time and control over our health – they are our bodies !

- My Independence

To give us space – not too much at once; to feel safe – to help us find out about bullying and hate crime, and what to do about it; time to think for ourselves; support to live on our own if we want; support when we are parents and to stand up for our rights !

- My Communication

To make things easy to read; letters & leaflets we can understand – keep it simple! to find out what works for us – we are all different; to speak for ourselves and have time to think and answer – don't rush!
